NATURE / ISLAND LIFE

Into the outdoors

Along the coast, down quiet lanes and across the hills, Sejerø reveals its natural beauty.

The coast and beaches

The shoreline changes between pebbles, sand and coastal meadows. Start from Sejerby and the harbour (1), or continue around the island at your own pace.

Revet and Nekselø Bay (9)

At the southeastern tip, an unusual zigzagging stony reef reaches around 3 km out to sea. Look for cormorants and gulls; beware of currents, waves and water levels.

The heath near Mastrup (5)

A distinctive heathland west of Mastrup, home to heather and juniper. It developed through centuries of grazing on poor soil.

Seven walking routes

The local walking association has described seven routes along beaches, paths, field tracks and quiet roads. Several connect points 1, 5, 6, 7 and 9 on the map.

WILDLIFE & BIRDLIFE

Nature all around

Sejerø offers a haven for wildlife – and for anyone who loves the peaceful rhythm of nature.

An island without foxes

Sejerø has no established fox population. This helps hares, pheasants and many other animals thrive. You may spot them beside quiet lanes and open fields.

Roe deer in the hills

Roe deer were introduced in 1999 and have since spread across the island. Watch for them near hedgerows and fields, particularly at dawn and dusk.

The black guillemot

This small dark seabird with bright red legs is a local emblem. It nests in holes in the coastal clay cliffs. Waders, birds of prey and migrants also visit on their journeys across the Kattegat.

Free-roaming peacocks

One of Sejerø's most surprising sights is its free-roaming peacocks. Their number has previously been estimated at around 100. Look out for their brilliant feathers, but please give them space.

Enjoy wildlife from a distance, keep dogs on leads and respect nesting birds.

SIGHTS

Places with a story

Sejerø's past is written into its landscape, from Bronze Age mounds to historic harbour buildings.

Sejerø Lighthouse at Gniben (6)

The distinctive yellow lighthouse was built in 1852 at the northwestern tip of the island. Enjoy a coastal walk and expansive views out to sea.

Kongshøj (7)

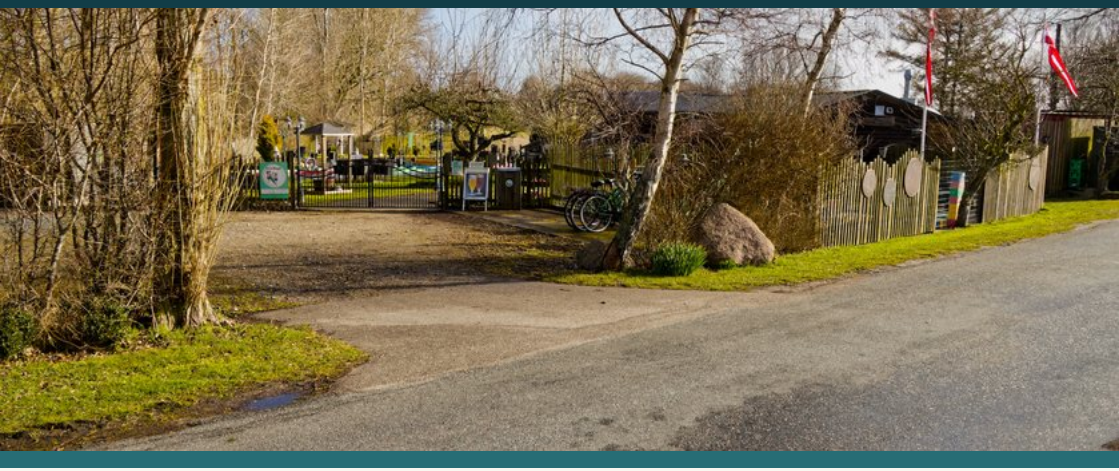

One of Sejerø's surviving Bronze Age burial mounds, on the island's highest point. Discover sweeping landscapes and traces of ancient island life.

The ancient dolmen (8)

A well-preserved Neolithic long dolmen at the southern tip was constructed around 5,500 years ago.

The church and Black House (1)

Visit Sejerø Church and the Black House at the harbour, a historic tarred building now telling the story of local fishing.

EXPERIENCES

Something for everyone

Combine nature with storytelling, art, outdoor activities and time to unwind in Sejerby.

Culture house and shop museum (2)

At Sejerbyvej 7, explore a preserved old-fashioned shop, period living rooms and local history exhibits. The culture house also hosts exhibitions and events.

Storytelling sculptures (3)

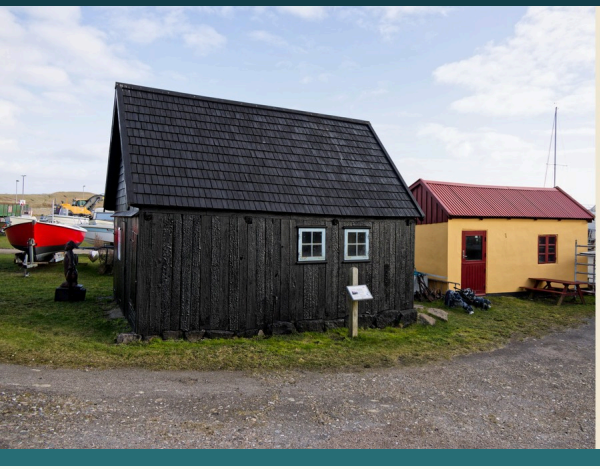

Nine sculptures around Sejerø feature QR codes linking to audio tales about history, nature and folklore. A fun way to explore with children.

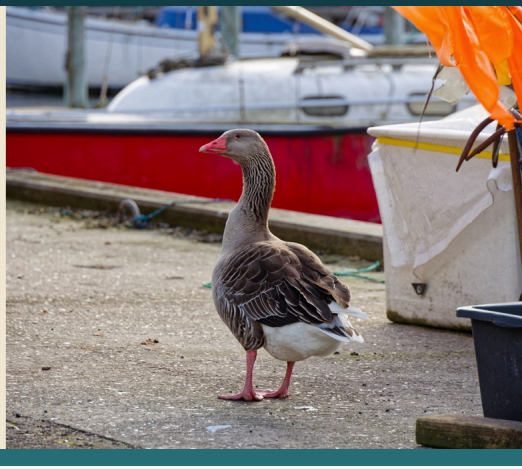

Golf and minigolf (4)

Play golf amid rolling hills and views over Sejerø Bay, or enjoy a relaxed game of minigolf with family and friends.

Art, glass and local shops

Discover crafts, glass, ceramics, small shops and farm stalls – especially around Sejerby and the harbour (1). Opening hours vary by season.

HISTORY / FOOD

Roots and flavours

Sejerø is more than a holiday island. Its stories live on through the landscape, community and kitchen.

From prehistory to island community

Burial mounds such as Kongshøj (7) and the dolmen (8) show that people lived here thousands of years ago. The island appears in King Valdemar's cadastre in 1231.

Life on the island

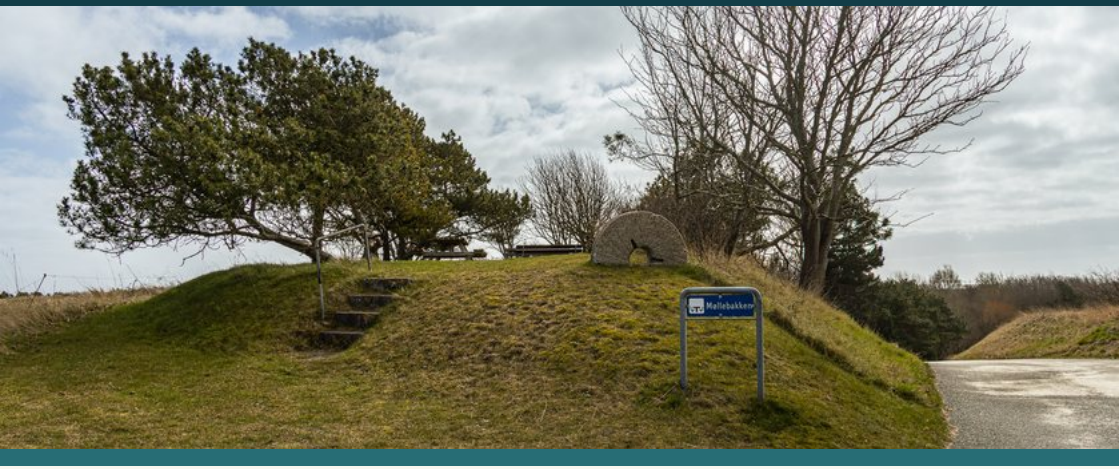

Sejerby and the harbour (1), local associations and events bring together a small year-round community. Many visitors return for the calm pace of island life.

The taste of Sejerø

Fulskager, the traditional dish "kød og kæber", Pentecost cakes and Sejerø pepper nuts are part of the island's food traditions. Ask about local seasonal produce too.

Places to eat and shop

You will find cafés, eateries, the local grocery store and producers – particularly around Sejerby and the harbour (1). Check opening times in advance.

PLAN YOUR TRIP

Make time for island life

Slow down and give yourself time to explore.

The ferry from Havnsø

The Sejerø ferry arrives at the harbour near Sejerby (1). The crossing takes about one hour. Reserve a space and check the current timetable before travelling.

Great ways to spend a day

Begin at the harbour and Sejerby (1), choose a walking route towards the heath (5) or lighthouse (6), and finish by Revet (9), scenic viewpoints or a good meal.

Practical tips

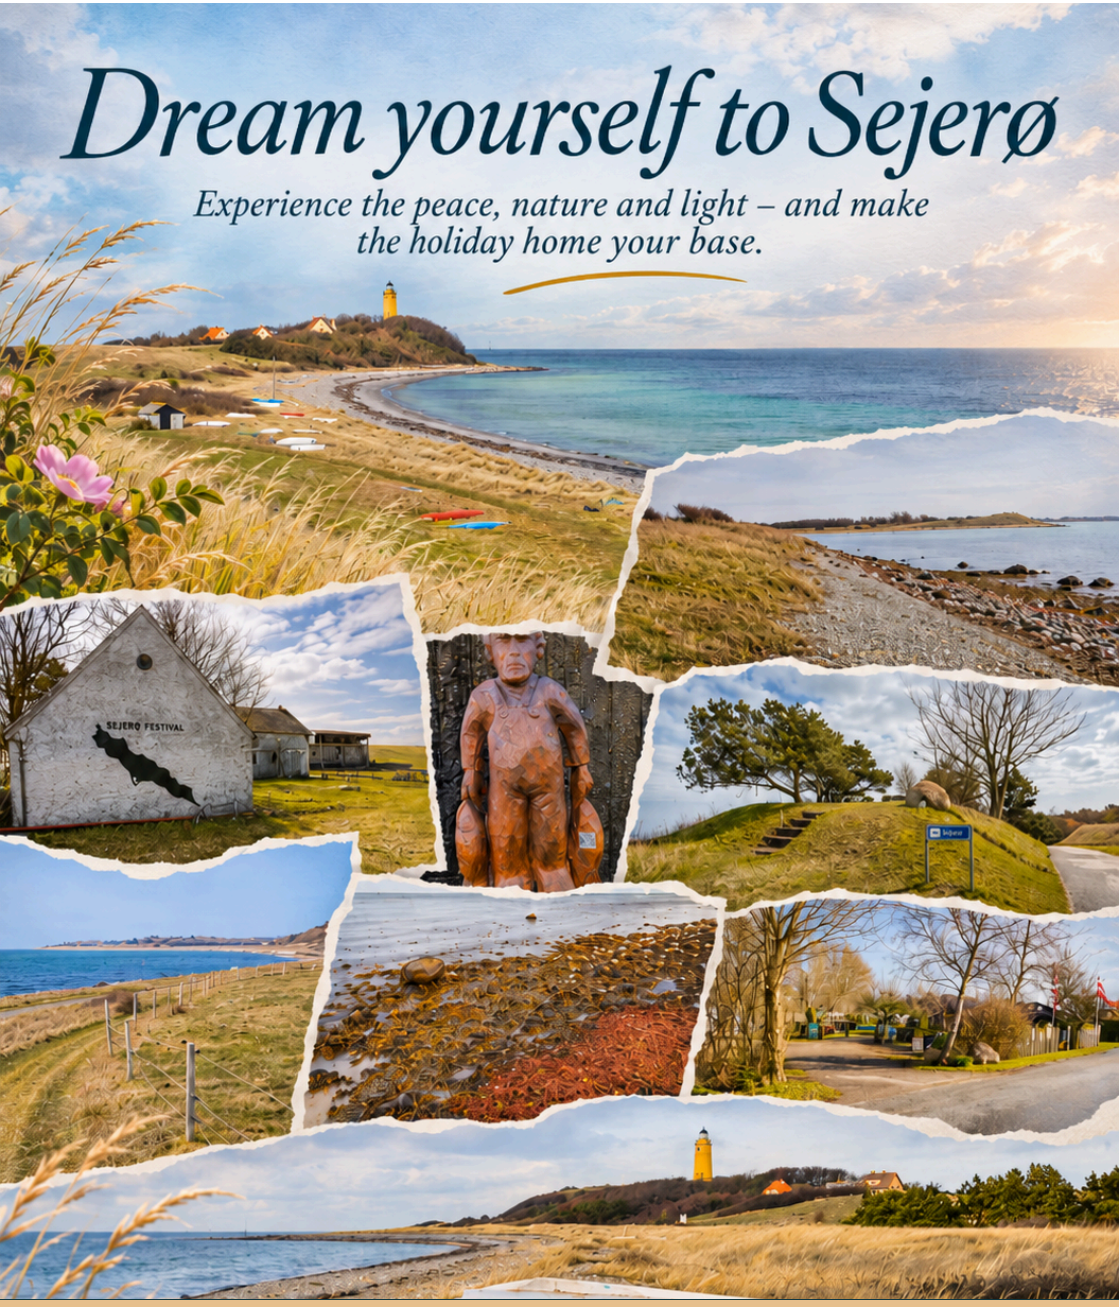

Bring sturdy shoes, windproof clothing and perhaps a bicycle. Please respect wildlife, private land, protected monuments and coastal conditions.
